

Letter from an incarcerated inmate to his loved ones

Dear _____,

I hope this letter finds you well and you feel my great love for you, God, Jesus Christ and all those who have helped me. I am so grateful to God for humbling me and bringing me closer to Him and His Son, Jesus Christ.

Please forgive me of all my wrong doings and sins or trespasses against you and others. I feel horrible for the pain, heartbreak and wrong I've done to you and others. I've repented and I have been forgiven by the Lord Jesus Christ, our Savior!

I have no ill feelings toward you or anyone. I forgive everyone and I love you more each day I'm away from you. I am at peace knowing I am doing all that I can to become who God wants me to be, even my best self. I have been through the refiner's fire, shaped and molded into who God wants me to be forever.

I hold no grudges, make no judgments or shun anyone from my open arms of love and forgiveness. When you are ready to have a wonderful, loving, peaceful and kind relationship in the sight of Jesus Christ, I am ready! I wash my hands and feet clean of any force keeping us apart; I desire to be united "as one" heart and mind in the sight of God.

I'm here for you! I'm here for "us" to become an eternal family with total forgiveness and unconditional love. I will stand on the right hand side of the Lord and pray daily for you and I to be together. I look forward to reuniting. I hope to hear from you soon. I'll be praying and waiting with open arms.

Love,
